

Hi All,

Left Melbourne on Tuesday 8th June bound for McMaster's Beach and a two week stint with the wee ones... Slept from 7 p.m. til 7 a.m. this morning - who says looking after littlies is not tiring!!!!

😓 but the photos will explain why I love them so.

Travelled across NSW to Tamworth, spent the night in a roadside stop - pretty noisy but I didn't hear a thing!!

From there to the Warrumbungle National Park, 30 odd kms from Coonabarabran and the first 'wow' since I left Tassie.. little pointed cones of past volcanoes sticking up from the surrounding plain.

Have settled into the camp-site which is very civilised- powered and toilets. It is quite close to Siding Springs Observatory and there's an open day there tomorrow - guess where I'll be when it's raining outside????

My 'rig' is travelling beautifully, churning through the km's, sitting comfortably on the road except when an unexpected undulation hit at 80-90 km/hr sends us into a low earth orbit for a second or two~whoa!!!

Will explore here for three days before heading more NW to Nyngan and Bourke and from there to Quilpie, but will send up-dates whenever I have the power and internet reception, cheers for now,

Ann
